Major Field Research Programs:

1. Directed the archaeological excavations at Tepe Yahya in southeastern Iran from 1966-1975. Major funding came from NSF, the Ford Foundation and private benefactors. The research conducted here resulted in over two dozen articles, and 3 monographs to date. Two additional monographs are in press.
2. Directed 3 seasons of archaeological survey in Saudi Arabia 1977-1979. This represented an initiative of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia which invited a number of archaeological teams to undertake these first surveys of Saudi Arabia. A number of articles were published on these surveys in the journal Atlatl, the major journal for the archaeology of the Arabian peninsula. Field research was funded by Saudi Arabia.
3. In 1976-77 we were invited to undertake the first archaeological survey of the Sultanate of Oman by the government of Oman. This project was funded by the Oman government, NSF, and Harvard University. Results of these pioneering surveys were published in Volume 1, Number 1 of the Journal of Oman Studies.
4. From 1979 to the present I have been directing collaborative research in the former USSR. From 1979 to 1985 I chaired the first Archaeological Research Exchange Program between these two countries. In 1985 I directed collaborative excavations at Sarazm, Tadjikistan SSR and in 1988 I began a major program of excavation with Dr. Victor Sarianidi at Gonur depe. In 1993 I began a major program of excavating at Anau in Turkmenistan. The research in the former USSR and today in Turkmenistan has been funded by IREX, (The International Research and Exchanges Board, a major source for funding in the former USSR and Eastern Europe,) the Academy of Sciences of the USSR, NSF, Harvard University, and private benefactors.

5. In the Fall of 2009 I initiated an archaeological survey and excavation on the island of Tarut, Saudi Arabia. This is a major archaeological site that has occupation from the middle of the fifth to the first millennium B.C.

Director of the Peabody Museum. Harvard University - 1977-1990

As Director of the Peabody Museum the following programs were initiated that effected the research, duration, exhibition, and publication of the ethnographic, archaeological, and biological collections of the Peabody Museum.

1. A major program of renovation was initiated that effected the entire storage facilities housing the collections of the Peabody Museum. From its inception in 1978 to its completion in 1981 over 40% of the museum was renovated at a cost of 5.4 million dollars. Compactor storage facilities, environmental control systems, and security devices were installed throughout the new facility. Additionally, new storage facility was constructed in 1981 to house the majority of the archaeological collections. This facility constructed within a building already owned by Harvard University was turned over to the Peabody and renovated at a cost of 825,000 dollars. Funds for this project were provided by grants from NSF, NEH, private benefactors and the sale of museum paintings.
3. In conjunction with the renovation project at the Peabody Museum a program was developed that initiated the computerization of the Peabody collections. In 1979 two Digital VAX systems were purchased (upgraded to Sun Stations in 1989). The effort initiated at the Peabody Museum, in the late 70's, was among the very first to develop a program of computerizing the anthropological collections of a major museum. With the help of grants from NSF and NEH, and in collaboration with the Field Museum and the Smithsonian, computer programs were designed suitable for anthropological collections. Today tens of thousands of artifacts are recorded on the data base of the museum holdings.
4. The Tozzer Library at the Peabody Museum, one of the largest anthropological libraries in the country, initiated with Peabody funding the journal Anthropological Literature An index to Periodical Articles and Essays. This journal, published quarterly, makes available to all subscribers an index of the library collection at the Tozzer. In 1983 the Tozzer Library became part of the Harvard University Library system.

5. In 1986 a program was initiated to renovate the largest exhibition area at the Peabody Museum: The Hall of the North American Indian. With a major grant from NEH and funds raised from private benefactors a wholly new exhibition hall in an environmentally secure area was installed and opened in 1989 at a total cost of 1.3 million dollars.
6. Finally, over the course of my 13 year tenure as Director the Peabody Museum increased its capital endowments almost four-fold. In addition to these increased endowments a program of renovation costing in excess of 6 million dollars was successfully completed and funded. Lastly, I was personally responsible for raising the endowment funds for two professorial chairs: The Landon T. Clay Professor of Archaeological Science and the George and Janet MacCurdy Professor of Paleolithic Archaeology both situated within the Peabody Museum and serving in the Department of Anthropology. These Chairs as well as the increased endowments enable the Peabody to sustain strong programs of research, publication, exhibition, and collections maintenance.
