COLLEGE FELLOW IN THE ARCHAEOLOGY OF INEQUALITY

Harvard University
Faculty of Arts and Sciences
Department of Anthropology

Position Description: The Department of Anthropology seeks applications for a College Fellow in the Archaeology of Inequality, with a preference for students working on Environmental or Forensic / Bioarchaeology. The appointment is expected to begin on 1 August 2020. The College Fellow will have teaching responsibilities, with 25 percent of the appointment reserved for the Fellow’s own research. Teaching duties will include one course on some aspect of the archaeology of inequality, a methodological course, and one other course to be determined by the interests of the Fellow in conjunction with departmental needs. The Fellow may also advise and evaluate senior theses. The appointment is for one year, with the possibility of renewal for a second year, contingent on performance, position availability, curricular need, and divisional dean authorization.

Basic Qualifications: Doctorate or terminal degree in Anthropology, Archaeology or a related discipline required by the expected start date and must have been received no earlier than 2016.

Additional Qualifications: Demonstrated strong commitment to teaching is desirable.

Please submit the following materials through the application portal by March 15, 2020:
